Welcome to a Shabbat service!

What is the structure of the Shabbat Service?

- Welcoming people!!!
- Kabbalat Shabbat
- Dvar Torah aka “sermon”
- Maariv (Evening Prayer)

How to learn the Shabbat Service

- Practice. Still can't get it? Practice more. Still can't get it? Because you didn't practice!
 - It takes a minimum of Seven Times Correctly to learn Shabbat service. Learning anything seven times puts it in your permanent, long term memory
 - Give yourself fourteen days to learn it: go through the service everyday twice for a week, then once a day for another week.
- You have the ULTIMATE cheat sheet: this book!
 - Most siddurim transliterate the words with no thought as to how they are sung. This transliteration is based on how the services are performed, like guitar tablature or sheet music.

Customizing the Shabbat Service

- Kabbalat Shabbat has the most freedom halachically
 - Singing, English/native language, meditation, chanting, etc. are all fine
- D'var Torah
 - Keep it short (after five minutes you lose people) and to the point
 - The Big Three: this week's portion name, what it's about, what that means for “me”
 - There are exceptions to every rule on this
- Maariv can be as long or as short as it needs to be
 - Customs of the community dictate your freedom with this
- If you have the freedom to do what you want with the service, by all means, do it!
- Go to an Orthodox minyan, Conservative/Reconstructionist/Reform/Renewal etc. and get ideas
